The questionnaire has provided me with a lot of information, it has shown me that people prefer more alternative forms of music. It also showed me that people watch music videos quite often. This surprised me as it seems people are watching videos less and less. People also prefer a narrative, story based video rather than a non linear one. I had already expected this and this was the reason behind me choosing to create a narrative video.

More people then not prefer some form of live footage in a music video to none, I also suspected that this was going to be true and why I chose to use a certain amount of live footage in my music video. People are unsure of the name Six Feet Over, with some liking it and some not. This was not expected as I had hoped the name would appeal to everyone, but just because the name isn't favoured doesn't mean it isn't rememberable by an audience.

People assumed that the genre of the band was Rock/Heavy Metal/Rap and RnB, this was not accurate to the style I had chosen and if I had to create a new name I would find a name which fits with a Pop punk/alternative band. The most common ways for people to listen to music is online through sources such as Youtube. But it is also common to use computer sources such as iTunes and even television and radio.

The questionnaire also revealed that a majority prefer to listen to female vocalists rather than to a male.
